

The Fitzroy at 514 West 24th Street is an eye-catching 10-story boutique condominium, with a striking exterior and impeccable interiors located in Chelsea, New York, between Tenth Avenue & Eleventh Avenue. Building design from the 1920s serves as the inspiration behind the Fitzroy which is part of a surge of high-end towers that make use of old-school building materials and design touches. The façade is made up of stunning, green terra cotta tile and custom-made wooden and copper window units. Designed by Roman and Williams, the building's rich detailing and bold vertical lines evoke the Art Deco style and are a break from the glass and Modernistic designs rising throughout West Chelsea.
