

An Amazing Reconfiguration of an Industrial Property

Lissoni & Partners have designed Shangri-La Shougang Park, a new hotel in Beijing that reimagines industrial architecture for the hospitality world. The building consists of an industrial conversion into a hotel by using the historical past of the complex located within an abandoned industrial area. Designed as a new, five-star hotel, it features a series of interconnected structures.

These are mainly divided into two areas: the Main Building, housing the common areas, and the Guestrooms Building, accommodating 282 rooms. The whole structure still consists of concrete walls and steel roof trusses, evidencing those ravages and markings of time that have transformed it into a fascinating backdrop - Piero Lissoni and his colleagues at their best!

Shangri-La Shougang Park was completed in December 2021 and inaugurated on the occasion of the Beijing Winter Olympics in 2022.
